

Halloween

In France, Halloween is not a huge celebration, however, in the 90s this celebration started becoming more popular among the younger generation and travellers. Nowadays, even shops and restaurants promote this celebration and it's become more of a commercial opportunity. In France, the trick or treat is different as the trick is not very popular still.

What is celebrated during the same time of the year in France is la Toussaint (Christian feast) 1st November- a day to remember the dead. People visit the cemetery on this day and bring flowers. They also have specific recipes prepared for this particular day like les niflettes.
